MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

THE MONEY SPINNER. This is the title of a neat piece of romantic com edy, written by A. W. Pincro, of London-a young and hitherto unknown writer, but one who has suddenly made a good mark-and last night presented, for the first time in America, at Wallack's Theatre. It is comprised in three acts. Its movement takes place partly in Paris and partly in Rouen. It requires two set scenes, and it introduces eleven persons. The style is light, often elegant, sometimes epigrammatic prese, not much diversified under the legicimate and usual influence of the characters that speak it, and occasionally disfigured by dashes of cockney slang; but, in the main, commendable for terseness and polished simplicity. The piece, as it has been acted in London, consists of the second and third acts as presented here. The first act is new, the author having added it with a view to the production of his comedy in this country. It is a well-planned, compact and charming act, but connected with its successors by such a slender thread that it may be considered complete in itself.

The heroine, Millicent Croodle, a gambler's daughter-nicknamed the Money-Spinner on account of her invariable good fortune cards-rejects a man whom she loves, accepts a man she does not love, and finally changes her mind and marries the man whom at first she refused. All this passes in the ante-room of the cambler's den, and it is illustrated with colloquies that are full of feeling, and marked by many delicate word touches and tones of contrast; and the preliminary episode serves to bring on all the persons implicated in the story that follows. This scene, and indeed the whole play, reminds the observer of Tom Robertson's delightful manner, as in particular, exerted in his beautiful comedy of "Caste." But Mr. Pinero comes a long way after that most delicate and consummate artist. In Caste" the grip is laid squarely on a subject of universal and perpetual interest; in "The Morey Spinner" there is simply an adroit exposition of an exceptional set of circumstances. The former will always charm by the deep and subtile meanings that shine softly through its spontaneous development. The latter, though deeply interesting, lacks much of its power, as soon as its story has once been told-making one think of the traditional bee of boyhood, that forfeits the sting in We shall not rehearse the story, since that might only mar the pleasure of readers who intend to see the piece. It hinges on the extraordinary conduct of the Money Spinner in trying to save her husband from the consequences of an act of erime, and it brings out its several types of character into strong relief in a culminating scene of impressive pathos The second act proved a little dull, last night, but the first and third went brilliantly, and the piece is undoubtedly a success. Miss Rose Coghlan was entirely charming, as the Money Spinner-her subtile denotement of the inherent goodness of the most unfortunately situated and most cruelly tried and tempted woman being direct, sincere, delicate, and winningly sweet and gentle. There was a tone of true pathos running through the whole embodiment, and it was likewise rich with exuberant woman-like tenderness and devotion, Mr. Elton handled effectively a somewhat incomprehensible character, compounded of earnest emotion and grotesque bombast. Mr. Edwards acted the detective with admirable ease and finish, and Mr. E. V. Sinclair ease and finish, and Mr. E. V. Sinclair made a hit with his sketch of the broken-down gentleman. Mr. Tearle is fitted with a character such as always clicits sympathy—the thoroughly good fellow at heart, who seems a simpleton—an this he acted perfectly well. The moral aspects and tendencies of "The Money Spinner" are somewhat too complex to be considered off-hand. There will be abundant time for further and more careful consideration of the subject. The reception given to the piece was cordial, though not demonstrative. The audience, for a wet and dismal night, wus numerous.

BROOKLYN PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY. The third concert of the Brooklyn Philnarmon Society took place at the Academy of Music last night, when these pieces composed the programme :

chronological order; each filled with self-sufficient beauty; each contented to give expression to the old ideals in musical art. The enjoyment they afforded was of a quiet and serene kind. The beautiful melodies were drunk in without brain-racking as to any extraneous significance fastened upon them by their composers; the instruments of the band talked in their native ac cents, in the registers and combinations that showed their tones in their greatest beauty, and all the problems of the later art were left untouched. It was rather an old-fashed musical evening, but none the less interes ag because restful. The first symphony, one of 118 by its composer: the pianoforte concerto, one of more than a score by its composer; the last symphony, though by the writer who extended the boundaries of the form to limits far beyond the horizon of his immediate predecessors' vision, all reflected the old spirit of symmetry, and conservatism in harmony and purpose which had enabled those prededecessors to write scores of works where one is written now. The performance, too, was in keeping with the spirit of the programme. In the symphonies the violins turned out the melodies with a delightful fulners and richness of tone, and much gracefulness and eloquence of phrasing, and the harmonies from the subordinate strings, woods and brass buoyed up the violins airily and gracefully. At the same time there were all the life and spirit that could have been desired. The only violation of the spirit of the evening was in the cadenza which Mr. Joseffy injected into the pianoforte concerto. Its foundation upon the subject matter of the first movement was too slight to justify its existence. Effective it certainly was to all who look chiefly for numbleness of finger in pianoforte playing; but to others it was a serious and almost vexatious interruption of the business of Mozart's piece. At their best it is questionable whether cadenzas are justifiable unless an adherence to the spirit of the composition is insured by the player's writing his own as Beetho ven did in his E-flat concerto, but so long as piano players depend more on their mechanical skill than on their insight, tastefulnes and intelligence for success, so long we will have cadenzas introduced into the classics, and so long, also, we will have the feelings aroused by the original piece dissipated by the foreign pyro technics of the performers. We could wish the cus-tom dead and buried out of sight or its practice re-stricted to musicians of the highest calibre. Mr. Joseffy won a recall, and in resp.nse played his ar-rangement of a prelude from one of Bach's violin

HAVERLY'S THEATRE.

The farce called "All The Rage," which was presented here last summer, and attracted attention as one of the silliest pieces ever written, will occupy the stage of Haverly's, this week. The advance sale of tickets for the Greek play in Boston took place yesterday and resulted in the receipt of $3,000.

Miss Lydia Thompson, Miss Maude Branscombe and Miss Ella Chapman were all sporting together, in one of Mr. Byron's old burlesques, a short time ago, at the Royalty Theatre, London.

An extra afternoon performance of "Edmund Kean," by Signor Rossi, will be given at the Academy of Music, on Tuesday, for members of the dramatic profession, all of whom are invited to

A touching remark has emanated from H. J. Sargent-formerly manager for Modieska and Mile Rhea-who exclaims: "How few, after years of toil, and assisting in building up the fortunes of artists, leave anything behind them to provide for their family!"

In Boston, this week, they will see the Greek Play, at the Globe Theatre; Mr. Boucicault, at the Museum, will act in "Arrah-Na- Pogue"; Denman Thompson, at the Boston Theatre, will appear as Uncle Josh ; Little Cormne Will begin an engagement at the Gaiety Theatre; and the Frank Frayne Combination will emerge at the Windsor. Maggie Mitchell has just ended an engagement at the Park Theatre, where she will be succeeded, to-morrow, by Mmc. Janauschek.

MUSICAL NOTES.

A concert will be given in Steinway Hall on February 8 by Nathan Franko.

Another concert of ballads, glees and madrigals will be given by Hague's British Operatic Minstrels

At first rehearsal, Wednesday, February 8, Mme. Jennie Claus will play the Mendelssohn Concerto for violin, Opus 64. M. Prevost, the tenor, left Mr. Mapleson's company in Philadelphia. He set sail for France last Thursday. Does this take "William Tell" out of the company's repertory f Miss Bella Irene Beringer, a piano player, will give a concert in Steinway Hall next Friday evening. She will have the help of Miss Laura Behini and Mr. Samuel Franko. Rudolph Aronson sailed for Europe on Friday to engage performers for the coming season of entertainments at the new Casino. It is said that he will try to secure the services of Herr Strauss.

At the second concert by the Kennedys, in Steinway Hall to-morrow night, an entertainment will be given which is called "A Night wi the Jacobnes"

The songs all relating to the rebellions in favor of the Stuarts in 1689, 1715 and 1745.

An interesting musical event in Brooklyn this week will be the first performance in Euglish of Bruch's cantata, "Scenes from the Frithiof Saga". Bruch's cantata, "Scenes from the Frithiof Saga," by the Amphien Society, on Thursday evening. C. Mortimer Wiske will conduct the music, Ivan E. Morawski will sing the part of Frithiof, and Miss Christine Dossert that of Ingeborg.

PATTI TO SING HERE IN OPERA.

Arrangements have been perfected for a season of Italian opera in this city, with Madame Patti as the prima donna of the company. It will begin very soon after the Opera Festival in Cincinnati, during which Madame Patti will appear in two concerts of the kind she has given ever since Mr. Abbey undertook the management of her and her company. She is now in New-Orleans, and will give a concert in Atlanta and Indianapolis before going to Cincinnati, which will be in the middle of February. She will therefore be here either the fourth week of February or the beginning of March. It is said on good authority that the opera season will last four weeks and that Mr. Abbey will be the manager. The performances will take place in Wallack's old theatre, now the Germania.

W. W. Tillottson, one of Mr. Abbey's agents, said last night that it was impossible for him to make any statement yet regarding the matter, but that he would be able to do so shortly. At the Germania Theatre, E. Beil, in the absence of Mr. Nenendorf, when asked as to what opera Patti would open with, replied: "She's going to be here only two nights and a matinee; but the fact is, I don't think I can give you any information about it. It' only in the air, you know, eh?" fourth week of February or the beginning of

THE DINNER OF COMPANY H.

The members of Company H of the 7th Regiment had arranged for their annual dinner at Mar-tinelli's last evening before the promenade concert of the regiment had been determined upon. Therefore when the officers of the regiment settled upon the same when the officers of the regiment settled upon the same evening for the promenade concert, the company, with some spirited teeling at the action of the regiment's officers, decided to carry out their original plans. About seventy-five members of the company and veterans sat down to dinner at 7 o'clock. There was the hilarity that usually characterizes such dinners, and the after-dinner speeches were appreciated in preportion as they caught the spirit of the company. Prominent among those who responded to toosts were: Lieutenant S.M.Hoimes, of the Regular I3th Infantry; General Robert Olyphant, Colonel G. M. Smith, Major William Allison, Captain Charles B. Bostwick, W. H. Sage and Kimmbel Wilson. Captain James L. Frice presided.

Son after 9 n. m. Mr. Dodge, standing between the parlors, introduced Governor St. John in a few appropriate words, and the latter made a brief speech, as follows:

I am very glad of this opportunity to meet so many appropriate words, and the latter made a brief speech, as follows:

I am very glad of this opportunity to meet so many of the good citizens of this erent city to right. My friend, Mr. Dodge, has suggested to me that I speak a few minutes about the amendment which the young State of Kansas has recently added to her Constitution lay which the manufacture and sale of intextent gliquors has been forever abolished. That amendment was submitted to a popular yete in the State, and it was crowned with a malority of 8,000. We have to contend with not only the liquer traffic of the West but with that of the East, large sums of money being sent to Kansas against us from New-Verk, Philadelphia, Chiengo and Louisville. The Prohibitionists were poer in funds but not in contact. Our enemies had money and controlled the majority of the newspapers; every solonn was against us. But we had every brave man and woman and God on our side. The amendment was carried and it has been dealrated constitutional.

Prohibition in three fourths of the State is as absolute and as strictly obseed as any other law against crime, In the larger cities, Leavenworth, Toneka and Atchison, the law has been trampled underfoot. But I believe that when the next Legislature meets there will be shown to be a power in voung Kansas that shall cause the law has been trampled underfoot. But I believe that when the next Legislature meets there will be shown to be a power in voung Kansas that shall cause the law to be respected jurplanes. It was said by our enemies that prohibition would decrease the value of property. The valuation of property in the State in 1831 under Prohibition rule was $10,212,000 more than in 1830, when the State was full of fouror seloons. It was said by the liquer dealers that prohibition would increased from eight and a half millions in 1830, when the State was full of fouror seloons. It was said by the liquer dealers that prohibition would increased from eight and a half millions in 1830, to week a substitution of the substitution of Governor Colquitt, being introduced next, said;

As for giving any information respecting the State of Georgia, there is no reason why our host should have referred to me. He has travelled in Georgia, built in Georgia, North Georgia, Middle Georgia and South Georgia. He knows her, and can speak for her if he chooses, I wish he would speak for her, for what I say will be suspected of the coloring which would naturally come from one who is both a son and Governor of of the State. If you wish to know the political condition of the State, I will answer with one fact. Georgia is the only Southern State in the Union that, since the war, has named one of her counties after a live Yankee. That Yankee is the Hon, William E. Dodge [applause]. I would not have you believe that we are in the nabit of doing this thing, or that we will name any more without due discrimination. My friend, the Governor of Kussas, has done just what ought to be done for the differing sections of the country, and it is the only way to cure their differences. I am ready to this here: but I don't know about it till I hear whether or not Governor Jewell or my other Northe of Governor has named a county in his State after a living Southern rebel. [Governor St. John—"We have a Davis County."]

Now if there is anything depressing to a man

County." I here is anything depressing to a man t is to have a cold, frog-like hand laid in his. We want It is to have a cold, froz-like hand laid in his. We want this hand-shaking matural. I am here to extend my hand, and it has a good deal of heart in it. Governor St. John has illustrated here the band-shaking that I like, where soul meets soul, and that is what is needed between North and South. When two friends who have fallen out wish to agree again, they don't argue or explain, but strike hands and lot the past be forgotten. In this I speak the sentiment of the carire South, and I wish it could be borne from one end of the country to the other with the sincerity with which I now say: "Let us have peace." [Applause.]

General Gordon was next asked to make a few remarks, and he responded in this way:

General Gordon was next asked to make a few remarks, and he responded in this way;

I am not a Senator or a Governor. As the darkies say,
I thought freedom had come down to me. But if I ever had the impulse to uter a certain sentiment, I have it now. The feelinest which these gentlemen have just given atterance have been ringing in my breast ever since the Stars and Bars went down. (Applause.) No one ever fought more devotedly than I. But since then the main impulse in my breast has been to bring together again every dissevered State. I have been called a rebell and a Democrat; but I might also be called a reconciler. What difference does it make any way what we are called so long as liberty livos, and the Nation makes good its promise to be the grandest on earth! In the South, gentlemen, you will find richer fields for your capital than the gold-mines of the West;
a sky that is bright and baimy, hearts pulsing with brother,y friendship, and a soil (shall say in the presence of the Governor of Kansas) richer than that of Kansas. [Applause.] Our people are not better, but as good as the people of Kansas, and nothing better could be said of them.

A few years ago! went to Boston at the invitation of a Republican club; they are as Republicans there. The president introduced me kindly and I got up with a good deal of feeting. I have too much feeling for my good. I helieve. I said, "My Fellow-countrymen." Instantly there was such a demonstration that I should like to repeat that I like to say it, "My fellow countrymen." Intentily there was such a demonstration as I never received from the old Second Corps of the Confederate Army. And so I say to-night, my fellow-countrymen, let us be brethren forever. [Applause.]

Ex. Governor Jewell's remarks were as follows:

ever. [Applause.]

Ex-Governor Jewell's remarks were as follows: Ex-Governor Jewell's remarks were as follows:
It is unfair to call on a layman and merchant after such eloquence. But Governor Colquitt has said that he should like Connecticut or some other State to name a county after an ex-rebel. Counties are not very plenty in Connecticut. They don't lie around loose. [Laughter.] But when you find a rebed that has the virtues of William E. Dodge them we will name one after him. [Applause and laughter.] I am glad to hear from the Governor of Georgia and the Governor of Kansas; and to know that Kansas is becoming a great empire of itself. We knew she would when we started her, and that's why we started her! [Laughter.] And I cannot help thinking what she would have been if we hadn't scut some people there and started her. As for the late impleasantness alludes to, I had forgotten it [Laughter, and a voice, "You were too young."] I had to scratch my head to remember it. We have forgotten it. [Applause.] When we were at the Atlanta Exposition with our cotton spinning and weaving machinery the Yankees in the place gave were at the Atlanta Exposation with our cotton spinning and weaving machinery the Yankees in the place gave a reception. Governor Colquitt and his wife kindly consented to assist in this reception by Yankees, for Yankees, and to Yankees, in regard to presperity, the South is meeting us on our own grounds. They have machinery, and the land on which to use it. And now, General, Hyou can beat New-England, go ahead, and we will bid you God speed. [Applause.]

The Rev. Dr. Roswell D. Hitchcock then made a brief speech, after which the reception again became informal.

SOCIAL INCIDENTS AT WASHINGTON.

Washington, Jan. 21.-The British Miniser, Sackville West, and his daughter, Miss West, gave a dinner this evening. The guests were the Italian Min ister and wife, Baron and Baroness De Fava; the Spansh Minister, wife and daughter, M., Madame Mademoiselle Barca; the Minister from Portugal, wife and daughter, Viscount, Viscountess and Mademoische Nogueiras; General Sherman; the Misses Sherman; Mrs. Carlisle; Representative and Mrs. Robeson; Mr. and Mrs. Adam; Lord George Montagu and Mr. Cadogan, of the Legation. Miss West does not receive on Tuesday, and has no regular day for holding formal receptions. General Robert C. Schenck gave a breakfast this morn-ing at his residence on Thomas Circle. The guests were the President, the British Minister, Senator Anthony, Senator Allison, Senator Hale, Representative Robeson, General Hunter, Henry Howard, of the British Legation, and Commodore Temple, United States Navy. Ex-Secretary Blaine was favired, but having been confined to his room for the past two days with a severe cold, was unable to be present.

Mr. HASKINS of the Discusse of Springsteid, will preach this evening with reference to missions in the West: service beginning at 8 of lock. The friends of Bishop seymour are especially invited to attend.

well-known in society here before her marriage, arrived n Washington this morning. She is accompanied by her husband and little son, and will spend a week with her parents before returning to her home in Chicago. Among the notable dinners of the past week was that given on Tuesday evening by the Chief Justice and Mrs. Waite, at their residence on Rhodo Island ave. The guests were E. A. Freeman, the English historian, and Mr. and Mrs. William E. Dodge gave a reception Mrs. Freeman; General Robert C. Schenck and Miss Schenck; Justice Bradley and Mrs. Bradley; Senator and Mrs. Hawley, and Professor and Mrs. Baird. The guests, including the host and hostess, numbered twelve at table; and Miss Walte, the daughter of the Chief Justice, declined to be the thirteenth, and did not join the party at dinner

> On Wednesday evening Senator Hawley gave a dinner at the Ardington, to the following guests: E. A. Fece man, Engene Schuyler, Senator Hoar, Senator Butler, of South Carolina; Senator Harrison, of Indiana, and Representative Crapo, of Massachusetts. The reception given by Representative and Mrs. Cand-

The reception given by Representative and Mrs. Candler, of Massachusetts, on Thursday evening, to the members of the Board of Trade, was a large affair. The guests foiled the prominent representatives of official society at the Capitai.

The Yale dinner given at the Arlington on Friday evening was an elaborate entertainment. The guests numbered fifty—most of whom were graduates of the college. Among those present were President Porter, of Yale; Ex-Minister Edwards Pierrepont, E. A. Freman, Eugene Schuyler, Dr. Peter Barker, Professor Newcomb, Colonel Mallory and Senator Hawley.

Oscar Wilde was introduced to Washington society last evening by Mrs. Robeson, wife of Representative Robeson, at the regular Friday evening reception of Commissioner and Mrs. Loring. At the time of Mr. Wilde's arrival there were about one hundred guests in the parlors. Mr. Wilde's afters was a black frock coat, knee breeches, black silk stockings and Oxford ties, an elaborate white vest, ruffled shirt front, upon which sparkled a single diamond. Many hadies and gentlemen sought an introduction to him. Mr. Wilde called this evening on Mr. Blaine, on a letter of introduction from Arcuibald Forbes to the ex-Secretary of State. Mr. Wilde is very desirous of meeting prominent public men, and says he wishes to learn something of American politics.
